New Type Of Torpedo

Highly Secret Invention Has Been Developed By British

Great Britain has developed a highly secret new type of torpedo which will be manufactured in the United States with money from the second lease-lend fund.

Re-Admiral W. H. P. Standley, chief of the U.S. bureau of ordnance, gave a house appropriation subcommittee information about the new torpedo but indicated that production could not be started for several years.

Although there has been no hint as to the secret new torpedo would have been developed by these already in use, naval officials have taken the need for torpedoes which would be invisible when fired—that is, which would not show the white smoke or telltale air bubbles which sometimes give surface ships enough warning to enable them to maneuver out of the way.

The criticism of present-day torpedoes is that they are fired by compressed air produce a large air bubble which having the submarine. When this bubble reaches the surface, it guides the torpedo and other submarine's position for a depth charge attack.

Re-Admiral Standley, however, warning against under-estimating the German U-boat menace because of the German decline in ship sinkings, has suggested that the Nazis may have developed a torpedo that eliminates those objectionable features.

Details of the new torpedo for the new British torpedoes together with the indication that it differs widely from those now in use led to the conjecture that the British, too, may have solved their problem.
